FYI -- I just heard from M Mag that the reporter is going with "Last Days of Judas Iscariot" for his Top 10 list (full description below). He told me it was a tough decision -- thanks all for working with me on this.

"Last Days of Judas Iscariot"
March 9-13, 2011
University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee Mainstage Theater

In a courtroom in present-day purgatory, the Bible's most famous villain is on trial and a roster of notables from Mother Teresa to Satan is called to testify. The award-winning play, written by New York-based playwright Stephen Guirgis and directed by the internationally-noted Rebecca Holderness, is both comedic and touching as it questions what is true forgiveness and real compassion. In "Last Days," Guirgis incorporates street slang, poetry and literary references to Thomas Merton and W.H. Auden. This promises to be a "helluva" performance by UWM theater students.

Hi Ed, LeRoy and Jon --

I just received a call from a reporter who is developing a "Top 10 picks" for M

Magazine's June issue to coincide with the full calendar listing that we worked on last week (attached to this email). He would like to highlight 1 of our performances in 2010-11. As such, please select 1 of your public performances for me to send on to him -- he will then select which one he will use.

Ellen
